SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: The Advisory Committee to the U.S. Section to ICCAT will meet Friday, October 2, 2020, first in a session open to the public to consider management- and research-related information on the status of Atlantic highly migratory species stocks and then in a closed executive session to discuss sensitive matters. The open session will be from 10 a.m. through 12:30 p.m. EDT, including an opportunity for public comment beginning at approximately 12 p.m. Comments may also be submitted in writing for the Advisory Committee's consideration. Interested members of the public can submit comments by e-mail (see ADDRESSES).

NMFS expects members of the public to conduct themselves appropriately at the open session of the Advisory Committee meeting. At the beginning of the public comment session, an explanation of the ground rules will be provided (e.g., speakers will be called on to give their comments in the order in which they registered to speak, each speaker will have an equal amount of time to speak and speakers should not interrupt one another). The session will be structured so that all attending members of the public have the opportunity to comment, if they so choose, regardless of the degree of controversy of the subject(s). Those not respecting the ground rules will be asked to leave the meeting.

After the open session, the Advisory Committee will meet in a closed executive session to discuss sensitive information relating to upcoming ICCAT negotiations regarding Atlantic highly migratory species conservation and management.
